NEW STEERING APPARATUS .- A ship carpenter in Mainhas invented and patented a new steering genr, which is pro-manced by many experienced mariners to be a most excellent contrivance. A statemery wheel forms the gear, which consists of a very simple combination of cogs. The tiller is intended to be about eighteen inches or two feet in length, upon the end of which is secured a segment of a circle with e.g.s. into which the gear plays. The tiller and attachment resemble a mariner's sectant, and plays so close to the deck that a simple platform covers the whole. The whole and goar require only an upright standard sufficient to secure them to the deck.

The advantages claimed are—a goar increase in the purchase, treated so that his little strength is required to work it; and abouthe fact that three revolutions of the wheel throw the tiller from steploard to lurboard, whereas the wheels now in use requi from six to ten revolutions to accomplish the same result. If this apparatus works as well as any reasonably be expected, it will be a great interevement on foreign inventions for steer
